NEED FOR REFORM

SINCE the Mandatory period the Manufacturers Association. which holds its general meeting today, has been recognized as the spokesman of Israel industry, especially concerning mat-ters of wages and work terms.

Okyo

Weeks

- 22 200

The central role of the Association was amply demonstrated in the recent crisis in the canning factories. In that case a major labour conflict was avoided owing to the Association's readiness to accept a compromise formula suggested by the Prime Minister. However, that crisis also demonstrated the Association's basic weakness, for it yielded mainly because it was not sure to what extent industrial firms — including some of its firms — including some of its members — would follow its lead if it resisted a compromise.

The fact is, that industry is perhaps the most poorly organized of all our economic sectors. Despite the face-lifting and consolidation achieved by the Association under Mr. Mosevics, it still ambrates only a misority. it still embraces only a minority of the sector it is called to represent. The labour force employed in its member factories numbers about 90,000, or a third of the total. In some branches its share is even smaller than

The Association also does not include the small industries and the diamond industry has an association of its own, Finally, neither Histadrut-affiliated nor State-controlled companies are allowed to join the Association. It is argued that such membership would involve dual loyalty because the Association is because the Association is a champion of private property.

In fact the Association is more or less pressed into this role by the reluctance of non-private industries to take part in its ac-tivity. A comprehensive Association, representing industrial management, irrespective of the nature of ownership, would shatter the prevalent philosophy which divides industry in these sectors. This would also lay bare the rifts existing between management and labour in public and semi-public enterprises.

The prevailing policy which prevents such clarity is seriously open to question. It is an outdated policy, not because the class struggle has come to an end, but because it has assumed new forms, in which the identification of employer as owner or capitalist entrepreneur is no longer valid. Labour is now confronted not by an owner class, but by a managerial class. The growing income differentials exist therefore between different sets of wage-earners.

Moreover, the ever-increasing importance of fiscal factors, including tax-deductable social benefits are little affected by struggles between labourers and the front office.

In order to cope with the problems of the 'seventies new concepts and instruments must be forged instead of adhering to those developed a generation ago. The current arrangements obstruct honest comparisons and discussion of profitability, effi-ciency and income. Moreover, the nation's industrial managers are kept divided, and therefore weak, and are unable to carry out their functions properly, while ultimate decisions in economic matters are placed in the hands of politicians....

A

That the present system is untenable is best shown by the fact that it is already cracking. For example, Hamashbir's flour mill is a member of the Association, just as is Koor's subsidiary, Tadiran. Kibbutz-owned plastics factories are not members of the Association's plastics section, but do take part in the plastic industry's "club" set up for the special purpose of jointly tackling the industry's general problems. On the eve of wage crises between the Association and the Trade Union leaders behind-the-scenes meetings are held between the Association and the Histadrut's own managers. The division between state-controlled and other industries is also receding.

Before very long therefore, a basic reform of the Manufacturers Association should be considered by all the interests

Israel tells U.N. Beirut to blame for Lod killing

UNITED NATIONS (UPI). - Israel renewed its charge yesterday that Lebanon was fully responsible for the massacre at Lod Airport and requested that the Lebanese "pur ar immediate and effective end" to Arab terrorist activities,

It told the Security Council that the three Japanese killers were re-cruited by the Lebanon-based Palestinian Popular Front and trained near Beirut.

In a letter to Yugoslav Ambassa. dor Lazar Mosjow, Security Council President for June, Israeli Ambas-sador Yosef Tekoah said it was up to the Lebanese Government to take effective measures to eliminate terror activities on land from its soil."

The letter referred to a statement by Lebanese President Sule; man Franjieh which said the three Japanese had been "transported :: Israel from a foreign capital by a foreign company."

Popular Front

In reply to Franjieh's statement, Tekoah said of the Lod attack: "the massacre... was conceived, planned and organized in Lebanon by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine based in Beirut.

If, therefore, he went on to hold, Justice Kahn were correct in his opinion that the new Execution Law was intended to simplify execution proceedings and save time, here was a classic example of the opposite effect. Furthermore, the longer final payment of the pur-chase price was postponed the greater the hardship to the debtor who had to continue paying the interest on the mortgage.

In conclusion, Justice Etzioni noted that the particular circumstances in the present case - in which the market value of the property had doubled between the time the respondent had made his bid and the date on which he was due to pay the residue of the purchase price — provided proof posi-tive of the need to observe, as meticulously as possible, the provisions with regard to speedy payment of the offered price. ### YESTERDAY'S PRESS Lawyers' fees

Davar (Histadrut) writes: "The practical issue now confronting the Knesset is whether to amend the fees of the Witkon commission lawyers by retroactive legislation. The Minister of Justice vigorously opposes such a move, and it must indeed be admitted that retroactive legislation is generally a totally undesirable solution. Such a possibility should not even be considered before more reasonable avenues for resolving the matter have been ex-

Jerusalem Poet Knesset Reporter

Premier Golda Meir and her

Alignment fellow-ministers will take the views of their Knesset faction

more seriously, in the wake of a rift between the faction and Justice Minister Y. S. Shapiro.

This is the feeling of the faction's leadership as well as of its rank and file, after Premier Meir, faced by an angry mood in the faction

on Tuesday night over the Witkon lawyers' fees issue, decided to avoid the issue till next Monday evening.

Mrs. Meir was thus able to postpone
